Key Takeaways:

Since its initial September 2013 conference, the Citizens’ Commission on Benghazi has launched a months-long investigation into the causes and elements involved in the Benghazi, Libya attacks of September 11, 2012. This research, which involves interviews with several knowledgeable sources, has led the CCB to conclude that

- Muammar Qaddafi expressed his willingness to abdicate shortly after the beginning of the 2011 Libyan revolt, but the U.S. ignored his calls for a truce, which led to extensive loss of life (including four Americans), chaos, and detrimental outcomes for U.S. national security objectives across the region.
- The U.S. facilitated the delivery of weapons and military support to al Qa’eda-linked rebels in Libya.
- On the day of the attacks in Benghazi, whether or not there was an official order to stand down, the result was the same. There were military assets, for example, at the U.S. base in Sigonella, in Sicily, Italy that could have been brought to bear, and perhaps could have saved the lives of the two men killed at the CIA Annex, the scene of the second attack that night. The failure to attempt to rescue these Americans amounts to a dereliction of duty.
- Previous investigations have been ineffective as the cover-up of Benghazi continues at all levels of government, prompting the need for a Select Committee with the power of subpoena to investigate this tragedy and compel testimony under oath outside the five-minute rule imposed on Congressional members by the current investigative structure.

Summary of Findings:

The war in Libya was unnecessary, served no articulable U.S. national security objective, and led to preventable chaos region-wide. In the period since the 2011 revolution in Libya, the country has remained fragmented, poorly governed, and overrun with violent militias, the majority of which are jihadist Al Qa’eda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) affiliates. Yet, at the time of his overthrow, Muammar Qaddafi was an ally of the United States in the Global War on Terror.

On 17 March 2011 the United Nations Security Council passed resolution 1973 for a “No Fly Zone,” ostensibly to protect Libyan civilians caught up in the hostilities between Libyan government forces and the rebel forces, which were dominated by the Libyan Muslim Brotherhood and al-Qa’eda. The following day in London, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton announced U.S. government support for the Brotherhood-led Libyan Transitional National Council in its revolt against Qaddafi.
The Citizens’ Commission on Benghazi (CCB) has discovered, however, that the ensuing civil war may well have been avoided, had the U.S. chosen to permit it. Within days of that declaration of U.S. government support for the Libyan rebels, Qaddafi sought to enter into negotiations with the U.S. Africa Command (AFRICOM) under a flag of truce for the purpose of discussing his possible abdication and exile. On 21 March 2011, Rear Admiral (ret.) Chuck Kubic began email and telephone contact between Tripoli and AFRICOM Stuttgart regarding the possibility of talks under a white flag of truce. Over the following days, Qaddafi expressed interest in a truce, and possible abdication and exile out of Libya. He even pulled his forces back from several Libyan cities as a sign of good faith.

RADM Kubic telephoned LTC Brian Linvill, the U.S. AFRICOM point of contact for all military matters regarding the Libyan situation, to advise him of Qaddafi’s desire to enter into military-to-military discussions. General Carter Ham was advised immediately on 21 March 2011 of these communications and conveyed them up his chain of command to the Pentagon. After two days of back-and-forth with the Libyans, however, General Ham had received no positive affirmation of consent from Washington, D.C. to pursue Qaddafi’s offer. The war continued and ultimately cost tens of thousands of lives. The U.S. failure to even consider Qaddafi’s request for talks, and its determination to enter and pursue this war in support of al-Qa’eda-linked rebels, presents the appearance of a policy intent upon empowering Islamic forces with no measurable benefit to U.S. national security.

Changing sides in the War on Terror: Even more disturbingly, the U.S. was fully aware of and facilitating the delivery of weapons to the al-Qa’eda-dominated rebel militias throughout the 2011 rebellion. The jihadist agenda of AQIM, the Libyan Islamic Fighting Group (LIFG), and other Islamic terror groups represented among the rebel forces was well known to U.S. officials responsible for Libya policy. The rebels made no secret of their al-Qa’eda affiliation, openly flying and speaking in front of the black flag of Islamic jihad, according to author John Rosenthal and multiple media reports. And yet, the White House and senior Congressional members deliberately and knowingly pursued a policy that provided material support to terrorist organizations in order to topple a ruler who had been working closely with the West actively to suppress al-Qa’eda. The result in Libya, across much of North Africa, and beyond has been utter chaos, disruption of Libya’s oil industry, the spread of dangerous weapons (including surface-to-air missiles), and the empowerment of jihadist organizations like al-Qa’eda and the Muslim Brotherhood.

The Weapons Flow: An American citizen source trusted by the CCB who has long experience in the Middle East described the flow of weapons from Qatar to the Libyan rebels and the diversion of some of those arms. After Qaddafi’s regime had been ousted, a delegation from the United Arab Emirates (UAE) traveled to Libya to collect payment for the weapons the UAE had financed and Qatar had delivered to the Transitional National Council (TNC) during the war. The UAE delegation was seeking $1 billion it claimed was owed. During their visit to Tripoli, the UAE officials discovered that half of the $1 billion worth of weapons it had financed for the rebels had, in fact, been diverted by Mustafa Abdul Jalil, the Muslim Brotherhood head of the Libyan TNC, and sold to Qaddafi. Furthermore, according to information learned during the UAE visit to Tripoli, when Jalil learned that Major General Abdel Fatah Younis, Qaddafi’s former Minister of the Interior before his late February 2011 defection to the rebel forces, had found out about the weapons diversion, he ordered Abu Salim Abu Khattala, leader of the Abu Obeida Bin al-Jarrah brigade to kill him. Abu Khattala, later identified as the Ansar al-Shariah commander who led the 11 September 2012 attack on the U.S. mission in Benghazi, accepted the orders and directed the killing of Gen. Younis in July 2011.

The key significance of this episode is the demonstration of a military chain-of-command relationship between the Libyan Muslim Brotherhood leadership of the TNC and the al-Qa’eda-affiliated militia (Ansar al-Shariah) that has been named responsible for the attack on the U.S. mission in Benghazi. Abu Khattala is under a Department of Justice sealed indictment. His brigade merged into Ansar al-Shariah in 2012, and he was positively identified to the FBI in a cell-phone photo from the scene of the attack, yet remains free and available for interviews to the media.

The White House Cover-Up: Despite the several ongoing Congressional investigations, as well as the State Department’s Accountability Review Board (ARB) report, the American people are no closer to knowing exactly what happened in Benghazi and why than they were on 12 September 2012. The Congressional committees have pursued their work in closed-door sessions as well as open testimony, but in a disjointed and uncoordinated fashion that has been stymied by administration stonewalling and the five-minute rule that severely curtails members’ ability to pursue a full and fair investigation. CCB members have signed two letters to Speaker John Boehner demanding the creation of a Select Committee to address these problems.

The CCB conducted an extensive research effort into the elements and sequence of the administration’s two-week campaign to falsely claim that a protest had preceded the attack on our Benghazi mission, and their efforts to blame a YouTube video for the attack. The White House campaign appears to have been well-coordinated with U.S. Muslim Brotherhood organizations as well as Islamic state members of the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC), who all joined in condemnation of the video, and, even more troubling, issued calls for restrictions on Americans’ free speech rights.
The FOIA Investigation: We have also begun our own investigation into the events surrounding September 11, 2012 through the use of the Freedom of Information Act request process. To date, Accuracy in Media and the CCB Members have filed 85 FOIA requests to the Department of State, Department of Defense, Central Intelligence Agency and Federal Bureau of Investigation. These requests can be seen at http://www.aim.org/benghazi/freedom-of-information-act-requests/. Major questions asked include requests to produce:

- [The] September 15th or 16th FBI 302 Interview Reports, and corresponding handwritten notes, of interviews conducted in Germany of United States personnel who had been in the Benghazi mission and the Benghazi CIA annex during the September 11th and 12th attacks on those facilities.

- Any and all videos depicting the United States Consulate in Benghazi, Libya (including the Special Mission Compound and the Annex) between September 10, 2012 and September 12, 2012. This request includes, but is not limited to (1) all videos and photographs obtained, transmitted, or recorded via any unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs), and (2) video of closed-circuit television monitor at the Benghazi Mission facility's Tactical Operations Center on September 11th and 12th, 2013.

The CCB Freedom of Information Act Investigation

The disjointed investigations by multiple House committees into the events of September 11, 2012 have yielded few new details regarding what occurred during the attack on the U.S. Mission and CIA Annex in Benghazi, Libya. What details have been uncovered are colored by partisanship due to the contentious nature of the two-party process. To uncover the truth about what happened that night, we have submitted 85 Freedom of Information Act requests to a variety of government agencies and departments.

Accuracy in Media, in conjunction with the CCB, has issued Freedom of Information requests to the Department of Defense, State Department, Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Central Intelligence Agency.

Subject: Muammar Qaddafi Regime Discussions with AFRICOM about Talks under “White Flag of Truce”

Shortly after NATO officially entered the Libyan revolt on the side of the rebels on 19 March 2011, former Libyan ruler Muammar Qaddafi expressed willingness to discuss directly with AFRICOM the possibility of abdication, exile, and an end to hostilities.

On 20 March 2011, General Abdulqader Yusef Dibri, head of Muammar Qaddafi's personal security, conveyed Qaddafi’s willingness to consider direct talks with the U.S. government under a flag of truce. Upon receipt of this information, RADM (ret.) Chuck Kubic telephoned LTC Brian Linvill at 49 7117 293645 at his AFRICOM office in Stuttgart, Germany (cell phone # 49 1515 258128). LTC Linvill served at that time as the AFRICOM point of contact for any and all communications involving Qaddafi’s Libyan military based on his prior service in Libya (2008-2011) where he had come to know personally all of Qaddafi’s senior military staff.

RADM Kubic told LTC Linvill that he had information through an intermediary that the Libyans were ready to establish a direct line of communication with the U.S. military command. Linvill immediately passed this information up his chain of command to General Carter Ham, Commander of U.S. AFRICOM. AFRICOM responded quickly and with interest in setting up a direct line of military-to-military communication with Gen. Dibri.

On 21 March 2011, General Ahmed Mamud (a senior aide to Qaddafi) telephoned LTC Linvill directly in Stuttgart, Germany and declared the following:

- The Libyans wished to declare a 72-hour truce for the purpose of conducting negotiations on the terms of a formal ceasefire.
- The talks could be held in Tripoli, Libya between Major General Abu-Bakr Yunis Jabr, the Libyan Defense Minister, and General Carter Ham.
- If these conditions are acceptable, the Libyans will stop all combat operations immediately and withdraw all military forces to the outskirts of all cities, and assume a defensive posture.
- To ensure credibility with the international community, the Libyans recommend observers from the African Union be invited into Libya to ensure the truce is honored.
That night, on NBC News, Gen. Ham issued a statement asserting that the U.S. military was not targeting Muammar Qaddafi. By 22 March 2011, Qaddafi verifiably had begun to pull his forces back from key rebel-held cities such as Benghazi and Misrata. Word was passed that he wanted a way out of the crisis and was willing to step down and permit a transition government to take power in his stead. Qaddafi reportedly sought only two conditions:

- Permit him to go after Al-Qa’eda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM); and
- Remove sanctions against him, his family, and those loyal to him.

Despite the willingness of both AFRICOM Commander Gen. Carter Ham and Muammar Qaddafi to pursue the possibility of truce talks, permission was not given to Gen. Ham from his chain of command in the Pentagon and the window of opportunity closed.

He has had a forty-year career focused on technology transfer, arms sales, and international development, with intensive experience in Europe and the Middle East. He has held senior management positions in the U.S. government and in major international management consulting firms.

At the Department of Defense from 2001 to 2005, Mr. Shaw served as Deputy Undersecretary of Defense for International Technology Security, a position created for him to assure that U.S. export controls are based on a solid technological understanding of the potential military and dual-use employment of all U.S. technology. Mr. Shaw was part of the office of the Undersecretary for Acquisitions, Technology, and Logistics (AT&L) and oversaw all international technology transfers and military sales involving U.S. technology in that area. Mr. Shaw at the same time served as Director, International Armament and Technology Trade (IATT), an arm of the DoD Inspector General’s office tasked with policing international technology exports.

In addition, his background as Inspector General together with his appointment as the technical IG trouble shooter for transportation and communications in Iraq surfaced the largest corruption case in Iraqi reconstruction: The fixing of the 3 billion dollar telecom tender in 2003 involving tens of millions of dollars of bribes to American and British officials by an Iraqi billionaire with the aid of British intelligence. Efforts by the perpetrators of the fix to try to smear Shaw resulted in his complete exoneration by the FBI and Department of Justice.

Mr. Shaw also established that massive amounts of high explosives and chemical weapons were clandestinely moved to Syria by Russian troops just before the beginning of the Iraq war. Those Iraqi chemical weapons provided a massive foundation for the current Syrian arsenal of chemical weapons. Shaw’s efforts established definitively the presence of WMD in Iraq and the way in which they were dispersed despite a widespread international effort to cover up their presence.

Mr. Shaw served on the White House staff in the Ford, Reagan, and Bush I administrations, and was White House liaison at the Defense, State, and Commerce Departments. He oversaw the personnel transitions at Defense in 1975 and 2001, at State in 1981, and at Commerce in 1989.
