

finish his brief late on April 13th or early on April 14th, after which his wife will proofread it and he will make some final revisions, making April 15th the date when he can file it in good shape.

3. Counsel apologies to the Court and to defendant's counsel for this need to ask once again for more time, but his work schedule continues to be chaotic. Last Thursday he was awoken after only a few hours sleep by two charitable organization who called in quick successions. He was unable to get back to sleep after this, but also unable to work effectively for quite sometime. With his sleeping schedule altered, he ended up sleeping most of the day Friday, except for a visit to his physical therapist. He got a fair amount of work done on the weekend, but it was curtailed by a couple of social obligations. On April 12th he has an appointment to see his internist.

4. Defendant does not oppose this motion.
